WHY EXHIBIT?

The federal government's recent green light for the Cape Wind project, after a decade of review, means a huge boost for the North American offshore wind industry. It signals to investors that the U.S. offshore market is open for business and that the U.S. is serious about competing for manufacturing jobs associated with this market expansion. Cape Wind is just the beginning – the industry's momentum will grow as other projects continue to move through the planning and permitting process and you want to make sure to be part of it all.
